'Street Horrrsing'

ATP

Fuck Buttons could, by most liberal yardsticks, be labelled a noise band, but long-coated power electronics cranks should approach with caution, lest the London duo subject them to 'Street Horrrsing's underlying pop glow. Not 'pop' as she is generally understood, that said. Layers of hypnotic analogue drone give way to quasi-techno workouts, back and forth across six tracks; Black Dice appear to be a Year Zero of sorts for the FBs, although the heavily processed vocals are sometimes reminiscent of '90s dance-rock relics Lo-Fidelity Allstars.
